

FATHER OF MURDERED GIRL LEAVES
BRISTOL TO AID IN THE INVESTIGATION; BODY FOUND NEAR HER LARCHMONT HOME

Frank Coyle, Parent of The Victim, Mary Coyle, Tells The Authorities He Had Been Employed On A Farm Near Here — Girl Had Attended Church Service

A man who identifies himself today as Frank Coyle, father of pretty 17-year-old Mary Coyle, who was found dead in Larchmont, N. Y., yesterday, arrived at police head-quarters in New Rochelle, N. Y.

Coyle told authorities he had been working on a farm near Bristol, and learned of his daughter's tragic death in a newspaper yesterday. Coyle stated he decided to go to New Rochelle immediately and would do everything possible to aid in the investigation. He was not detained by the police.

Coyle told authorities that his trade is that of a stone-cutter, but that he has been engaged in working on a farm near here for some time.

Mary Coyle left her home in Larchmont, Monday night, to attend a church service a few blocks away. Her body was found yesterday in a parking lot behind a theatre in that New York city suburb.

An autopsy disclosed an assault had been committed and she had been beaten, apparently with a hammer or a wrench.

A brown coat she wore was missing and detectives indicated a belief she was killed elsewhere and her body taken to the parking lot. It was found there by the owner of a cocker spaniel, attracted by the animal's bark.

The only clue to the identity of her slayer consisted of strands of blonde hair, clutched in her hands.

In support of their theory that she was killed elsewhere, police said the family of Mortimer Hersh, of New Rochelle, reported hearing a girl scream from a passing automobile at about 1:30 a. m.

Hersh lives about nine blocks from the humble houseboat on the mudflats of Long Island Sound where Mary lived with her mother. The Hersh home is in the opposite direction from that which Mary took when she kissed her mother good-bye to attend a novena at Holy Name Church.

Hersh said, according to the police, he heard a girl screaming:

"Give me back my coat! Give me my coat. Help, police! Oh, God help me. Police, help!"

So frenzied were the shrieks, police quoted him as saying, that he left his bed and ran into the driveway in time to see an automobile moving swiftly away toward Hudson Park, a city park.

Best W. C. T. U. Poster

Members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union met at the home of Mrs. Maurice Watson, Bath street, last evening.

Mrs. Ada Sands, as chairman of the religious education department, read the Scripture lesson from the Epistle of Paul to Philomel, followed by silent and oral prayer. In the absence of Mrs. Beswick, the Secretary, who at this time is attending the state convention at Williamsport, the minutes of the September meeting were read by Mrs. William DuHamel. The treasurer, Miss Jane Rogers, reported the financial condition of the treasury, and the payment at the present time of 50 members' dues. Mrs. Mary Hilburn, chairman of the membership committee, reported two new members.

Two duets, "Alone" and "The Lord Is My Shepherd," sung by Mrs. Sands and Mrs. Russell DeLong were well rendered. A very interesting article read by Mrs. Harry H. Headley, president, follows:

"120 candidates for confirmation took the temperance pledge at a Roman Catholic Church in Falls River, Mass. Said the Bishop, 'Religion is on trial with you.' He pointed to the people in the world who deny the existence of God. 'You hear of Russia, where the government is attempting to blot out all thought of God. Here in the United States, many are trying to do the same thing, to drive God out of your minds and souls. Only by attention to good things, keeping clear of evil influences and maintaining clean morals, can you hope to be successful.'"

Reference was made to the Frances Willard Centenary which opened with ceremonies at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. "Freshman girls of this school of learning will remember Frances Willard not only as the great educator for whom their handsome dormitory is named but also as the attractive girl of their own age who looks eagerly out of the lovely portrait occupying the most honored position there. Charming done in oils, after an old daguerreotype, by the internationally known artist, Karl Buehr, of Chicago, the portrait is the gift to new Willard Hall from Alpha Phi International, the women's fraternity which Frances Willard once served as national president."

A number of clever temperance posters were submitted by the different members present. Three were exceptionally fine. A green poster decorated with bright-colored flowers and pictures of one brand of whiskey, contained an original verse. This poster was judged worthy of the blue ribbon and was won by Miss Verna R. Miller. The second and third best were the work of Miss Jane Rogers and Miss Annie Heritage, respectively.

JUDGE JAMES SAYS
EARLE BETRAYED VOTERS

Republican Candidate Charges
That Lawrence and McCloskey Ran the State Gov't

BUSY KEEPING LID DOWN

HARRISBURG, Oct. 12.—Governor Earle last night was charged with betraying the people of Pennsylvania by allowing Democratic State Chairman David L. Lawrence and Matthew H. McCloskey, Jr., wealthy Philadelphia contractor, to run the Commonwealth. The charge was made by Superior Court Judge Arthur H. James, Republican candidate for Governor, as he extended his campaign into Dauphin County.

"For four years," charged Judge James, "George Earle has stood by while Dave Lawrence and Matt McCloskey ran the affairs of the State Government."

"George Earle betrayed the people of this State because he gave up the Governorship 60 days after he took office and turned it over to Dave and Matt. He hasn't been Governor because he thought they were going to make him President of the United States."

"The Governor has been so engrossed in keeping the lid down at Harrisburg that he has had no time to think of and solve the troubles of the 7,150,000 unemployed men and women of the State."

Judge James told the Dauphin county voters they were in an excellent position to judge the "merits and demerits of the Earle Administration."

"It's in your front yard where the mess has been made," he asserted. "You have had an opportunity to see this greed and corruption on the part of the leadership of democracy in Pennsylvania work its way down through the State employees and the population of the State, and to judge the result of this filtration of dishonesty," he added.

"The response which I received in Dauphin county today, the message I have read in thousands of faces in and around Harrisburg, show only too clearly that you have recognized fully the evil motives at work on Capitol Hill."

"The rest of the State will do well to observe the reaction of Dauphin county, and see that those men and women who have seen the Earle Administration the closest like it least—that nowhere in the State is there more bitterness over the fact that public confidence and trust have been betrayed, and our State's proud reputation dragged in the dust."

"Theodore Roosevelt, who dedicated your State Capitol 32 years ago, expressed the thought which is in the minds of the serious-thinking men and women of this State, when he said:

"We fight in honorable fashion for the good of mankind; fearless of the future, unheeding of our individual fates, with unflinching hearts and undimmed eyes; we stand at Armageddon and we battle for the Lord."

"There is one thing we need in Pennsylvania," he added, "and that is to be honest in the administration of Governmental affairs."

"As Grover Cleveland said, 'A public office is a public trust.'"

"Yet we see in Pennsylvania how that trust has been misplaced during the last four years."

"Every act of George Earle has led the people of Pennsylvania to believe there is evil underneath the Capitol dome."

Members of Union Fire Company No. 1, of Morrisville, are considering turning the title to the firehouse on South Pennsylvania avenue over to the borough with a view of having a second story added, and the cost, together with the maintenance of the building, paid out of fire tax funds.

The building, which is a one-story brick and concrete block structure, is free of debt and the entire cost was paid out of funds raised by the firemen and Ladies Auxiliary.

The building is now badly in need of repair and it is estimated the cost will be between $400 and $500. The question has been raised by some of the members whether the firemen and the auxiliary shall continue to raise money for the building while the law permits fire tax money to be used for firehouses.

The Capital View Company is paying for its two-story brick building on North Pennsylvania avenue out of tax funds, and the money the members raise through carnivals, suppers and the like is used by the firemen and auxiliary for expenses such as attending firemen's parades.

All the fire apparatus, the three pieces in the Union building and the two at Capital View, are all being paid for out of fire tax money.

A committee from the Union Company was instructed to meet with the fire protection committee of Common Council and discuss the matter of turning over the title with a view of getting a second story added to the building. A report is expected at the next meeting.

A number of the older members, who were active when the building was first erected, are strongly opposed to turning over the title to the borough because they claim the members of the company and auxiliary worked hard to raise the funds to pay for the same and the fire company should keep title to the building. It is said that as long as the building is the property of the fire company no fire tax funds may be expended on it.

Culminating a week's activities, Doylestown Methodist Church, which celebrated its centennial anniversary, on Sunday held morning and evening services which concluded the event.

The Rev. Alexander B. Davidson, the pastor, reported that six young people united with the church and were assigned to the preparatory class at the Sunday morning service. One adult joined the church by letter.

The opening meeting of the Newtown New Century Club was attended by 50 members and guests. A covered dish luncheon was served, with Mrs.

SAYS LOW EMPLOYMENT IS DUE TO HIGH TAXES

Walter D. Fuller, Chairman of Emergency Council of State
Ass'n, Speaks at Lancaster

POLICY DESTRUCTIVE

Special to Courier

LANCASTER, Oct. 12.—The idea that tax powers be used to stimulate plant expansions and re-employment in industry, instead of as a handicap to business, was advanced before the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Real Estate Association here today.

Discussing "Incentive Taxation" Walter D. Fuller, Philadelphia, said that "this is the way to make it possible for business to put the idle back to work and to expand employment constantly, so that there will be jobs for every willing worker and there will be resultant increasing purchasing power, so that an even higher standard of living will be an actuality instead of merely a promise."

Mr. Fuller is chairman of the Emergency Council of State Associations, non-political affiliation of more than 100 trade associations, which holds that excessive state taxation on business is the principal cause for Pennsylvania having 25 per cent more unemployment than the average for the nation.

"Suppose that the force of taxation was suddenly turned in the other direction and businessmen were told that the new philosophy would be that they would receive credit on their tax bill for money and foresight expended in new plants, new equipment and new facilities," Mr. Fuller said. "Suppose that under this new philosophy businessmen were encouraged to employ more workers in their stores and establishments and at higher and higher wages with the understanding that their taxation would be less onerous. Suppose that the employers who devise ways and means of smoothing out the peaks and valleys of unemployment, so that there would be steady income for the families of workers, were given some reward for their efforts, instead of being put in the same tax bracket with those who produce at high tempo for a short time and then dump their workers on relief rolls for months at a time."

"You men know what would happen. You know of plenty of instances in your own communities in Pennsylvania where businesses would expand into empty store rooms, take larger offices, build additions to plants and erect branches in other sections of the state. You can almost see the volume of business expanding under such a program."

THE uncertainty as to whether Mr. Roosevelt will speak in behalf of the Democratic candidates in New York and in other States where the Republicans have strong candidates and a good chance to win in the coming election—for example, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts and New Jersey—may be removed in a few days, but it still exists.

THE reasons are clear—first Mr. Roosevelt's advisers are not quite sure that it will be a good thing for him; second, the candidates are not quite sure that it will be a good thing for them. It is a question of judgment. An argument can be made on both sides. The President is being urged to speak by some; urged not to by others. It is said a survey is now being made for him by one of his personal scouts, who holds a high office in the Department of Justice but is never too busy for a job of political snooping. In fact he appears to think that the chief function of his position.

THOSE who want the President to speak assert that it will be a great mistake not to. His personal stake in the elections is large. Defeat of Democratic candidates in the larger States, accompanied by the election of a considerable number of new Republican members of the House, ing election—for example, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts and New Jersey—may be removed in a few days, but it still exists.

THE reasons are clear—first Mr. Roosevelt's advisers are not quite sure that it will be a good thing

Calvin S. Boyer, of Doylestown, president of the county federation, as guest of honor.

At the business meeting, with Mrs. Elizabeth Palmer presiding, three new members were taken into the club: Mrs. James V. Boring, Mrs. Howard Buckman and Mrs. Bjarn Bjarnsen.

Mrs. Harry Horne, chairman of the art committee, announced an art exhibit to be held in Langhorne, to which the club is asked to send exhibits. Miss Sara J. Packer, chairman of public health, said 13 patients had been taken to hospitals since June 1st. Mrs. John Luger gave a summary of the Garden Club activities during the past year.

The following delegates were named to the County Federation, to be held at Langhorne, October 28: Mrs. Lucy Porter, Mrs. William Lang, Mrs. Horace C. Effing and Mrs. Charles V. Cornell.

The club decided to hold a supper on October 27th.

WOMEN HEAR ISSUES OF CAMPAIGN DISCUSSED

Mrs. John W. Cooper and District Attorney Edward G. Biester Are Speakers

ELECT 19 NEW MEMBERS

That women are aroused over the situation existing in the governmental affairs of Pennsylvania was strikingly evident last night when an interested group assembled in the Travel Club Home to listen to a discussion of political topics. The meeting was sponsored by the Lower Bucks County Council of Republican Women. Mrs. John W. Cooper, president of the Bucks County Council of Republican Women, and Edward G. Biester, District Attorney of Bucks County, were the speakers. Both gave highly interesting addresses and enlightenment upon what confronts the voters at the election to be held November 8th.

Mrs. Cooper was the first speaker and she gave a very comprehensive outline of the work which is done by the Bucks County Council of Republican Women and discussed at length the platform of the Republican party. The speaker taking the platform plank by plank gave a very enlightening discourse upon the principles on which the Republican candidates are seeking the votes of the people.

Mr. Biester, in his talk, told of the qualifications of the Republican candidates and compared their background with that of their opponents. He told of the mess at Harrisburg and described very pointedly just what the Earle administration had failed to do in Pennsylvania in order to give this State good government.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Minerva Epstein and Mrs. Leo Lynn, chairman of membership committee, reported that 19 applications had been procured. These were elected to membership.

It was announced that the next meeting will be held in November, at which time Miss Anne Hawkes will be the speaker.

Mrs. Leslie Satterthwaite

British Warn Japan

London, Oct. 12.—The British government today warned Japan that it expects full protection of British interests in southern China.

Sir Robert Craigie, British ambassador to Tokyo, called at the Foreign Office and expressed his government's concern over the Japanese offensive near Canton. Fears have been expressed the entire vital naval base at Hongkong may be in danger.

Sir Robert took occasion to remind Tokyo of a threat to Anglo-Japanese relations which might arise from an untoward incident during Japanese military operations.

At present, the British naval force in the Hongkong and Singapore areas is considered sufficient to protect British rights and interests.

The fort at Hongkong consisted of the fifth cruiser squadron of five vessels, a destroyer division of four vessels, four submarines and a number of smaller escort vessels. A battalion of the East Surrey regiment is expected in Hongkong today in addition to another regiment scheduled to arrive there next week.

Sell 43 Dogs at Prickett
Stables; Prices Are Good

A total of 43 out of 49 dogs put up for sale at the first sale of its kind in this immediate vicinity, were sold at the Prickett Sales Stables, Bath Road, last evening.

The highest prices paid were $53 each for two hounds, purchased by a Bristol man. Good prices were commanded it is stated; but owing to bid not being as high as desired for one dog sired by a Warner Brothers motion picture dog star, was not sold. All dogs were either bird or hound dogs.

Bidders came from various points in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and in the large crowd was a man from one of the far Western states.

L. Dries Re-Named Pres't
Of Hebrew Congregation

Last night, members of the Congregation of Avath Achin met in the synagogue on Pond street and selected their officers for the ensuing year. Following the election there was an address made to the membership by Louis Dries, who was re-elected as president for the third consecutive year.

Mr. Dries, in his address to the congregation, called for unity. "Never in the history of the world have the Jewish people been called upon to be united as they are at the present time," said Mr. Dries. "Persecution of the Jews is on the increase, and refugees in all parts of the world are crying for help. I urge every one of you to join us shoulder to shoulder in the work, not only in the interest of our temple, but for the benefit of the Jewish race and in the community as well."

Mr. Dries urged the members of the congregation to send their children daily to the Hebrew school, and also to see that they attend Sunday School regularly. He announced that a dinner will be held for the membership and their families, in the synagogue, on October 17th.

The Rev. Kahn was recently appointed rabbi of the Bristol congregation, and comes highly recommended by the well-known rabbi, Robert Levy, of Trenton, N. J.

The officers elected last night are as follows: President, Louis Dries; vice-president, I. Wolson; treasurer, Bernard Barlow; secretary, Dr. Jules Fegeelson; trustees, Nathan Grodsky, Max Kaplan, Isaac Hopkins; chaplain, Benjamin Silber.

COLUMBUS

Columbus, whose memory Americans will honor today, was one of history's great adventurers, one who virtually plucked a continent from the unknown and prepared the way for the establishment of nations which were to serve as models of democratic government.

Columbus achieved great things primarily because of an indomitable spirit. Lesser men would have yielded to despair when one after another denied him funds for his great voyage of exploration. Others, even though gifted with high courage, would have acceded to the demands of an angry, mutinous crew to turn the prow of the ship toward home after weeks and months passed without a sign of land or of life. Less stalwart souls would have quit the fight in the face of the ingratitude of sovereigns, the malice, the misrepresentation and the conspiracies of enemies. But Columbus was cast in the mold of greatness. Suffering was to be endured, adversity to be met and conquered.

The name of the Spanish commissioner who sent Columbus home from Hispaniola in chains and the names of those who defamed him at the court of Ferdinand and Isabella are forgotten. That of Columbus, however, grows more luminous with the passing of the centuries. An Italian who served a Spanish King and Queen, he may be regarded as one of the greatest of Americans and honored as such.

BOW TO THE LADIES

Men should remove their hats in elevators, rise when women enter a room and give up their seats in crowded buses or trolley cars. That is the decision of a nation-wide survey conducted by a magazine for women to determine the trend of opinion among women of America.

Superficially one might judge that womanly selfishness played a part in the decision. But there is a deeper significance in the question and in its answer. In the same questionnaire, 80 per cent voted against the proposal of having a woman for President of the United States.

Intelligent women recognize that there is a sphere for women and that it is for the good of the race that woman should be respected in her sphere. Most of the women who are standing in street cars and buses are quite able to endure the physical requirement. But there is a subtle tribute to woman in the act of doffing the hat to her and giving her the preferred place, that is a powerfully protective influence in human society.

A new vitamin has been unveiled by the scientists and christened K—or Kay, of course, if it is a girl.

Men win fame and high plaudits prosecuting rich crooks, so this is still a land of opportunity.

Says Low Employment Is Due To High Taxes

real estate values rising and men and women marching spiritedly back to work.

"Instead under the policy of destructive taxation we have vacant factories, empty store rooms, homes falling into ruins, constantly swelling ranks of unemployed and more and more men and women thrown on the relief rolls each week in Pennsylvania.

"Business simply cannot afford, under destructive taxation to hire as many workers as it used to and expansion of business is chilled by the spectre of the tax collector. He comes first. He must be paid whether there is a profit or not. Before increasing payrolls and before considering expansion, businessmen today must see their way clear to satisfy the tax collector. Then, too frequently, there is nothing left as encouragement to risk capital.

"Too many businesses no longer can meet both their competitor in another state and the tax collector in Pennsylvania. They are forced to the wall. Their collapse is the stoppage of the heart-beat of the community. Many additional businesses, under excessive Pennsylvania taxation on business have been driven to migrate to other communities and to leave behind the vacant plants that become the focal points for a decay spreading devastatingly throughout the area."

Mr. Fuller cited results of a type of "incentive taxation in other states, showing how they have gained in industry and employment. Louisiana, he said, has attracted new plants which cost $47,000,000 and given work to between 15,000 and 20,000 men and women. New Jersey, he said, by a "friendly" attitude toward business has gained 2250 new industries since 1935 giving jobs to 17,000 workers. These new industries put $10,000,000 into new plants.

At the same time taxation in Pennsylvania has "raised the rent" on present occupants and prospective new industrial tenants of the state. As a result, only 74 new establishments, accounting for 4600 additional jobs have been added since 1935, according to a survey by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry. Mr. Fuller said. Another recent survey by the Pennsylvania Chamber of Commerce showed a net gain of 23 new plants and a net loss of 955 jobs.

Mr. Fuller said the fact the state is not getting its fair share of new industries is the principal reason for excessive unemployment in Pennsylvania, and added that there now are 1,355,685 men and women seeking jobs or nearly twice as many as when the Federal Census of Unemployment was made last November.

A study just announced by the Special Security Board, he said, showed that while there was a decrease of one per cent from July to August in the number of cases receiving relief in 105 urban areas in the United States in Pennsylvania Erie, Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia showed increases and only Reading reported a decline, which Mr. Fuller said showed that business in Pennsylvania is so hindered by excessive state taxation that it cannot keep pace with the rest of the country.

"Instead of being the great State which earned the reputation as the 'workshop of the world,' leading all other states industrially, Pennsylvania has slipped and on the basis of the latest report of the United States Department of Labor ranks below the leaders," he said.

The figures show according to Mr. Fuller that in August 33 other states made greater gains in employment than Pennsylvania, among them being New Jersey, Delaware, New York, Ohio, West Virginia, Maryland and Massachusetts.

"Those who say that suggestions that excessive state taxation on business be reduced, come from businessmen who want more for themselves are the same ones who would have told Columbus that the world is flat," said Mr. Fuller. Let me say emphatically that businessmen are not being purely selfish unless it is selfish to want to remedy conditions which cause a constantly growing population of men and women who are unemployed through no fault of their own. There can be no prosperity unless business prospers. And business in Pennsylvania knows that there can be no prosperity as long as the tax collector takes money that should go into pay envelopes of willing workers.

"If the whole purpose had been to serve selfish ends of a few businessmen then the Emergency Council of State Associations would never have come into being. The Council includes many groups, which are not directly affected by most of the new taxes put on business. The Emergency Council represents small and large business in Pennsylvania. It was formed simply because the groups felt that excessive state taxation on business has been destructive, and that every person in the state was affected, either through paying the increased taxes directly or through the serious unemployment problem which means less purchasing power in the state."

Mr. Fuller pointed out that the Executive Committee of the Emergency Council includes persons of various political affiliation and members of the various affiliates likewise have divergent political leanings.

"Our one and only purpose is to make the facts of the situation so clear and unprejudiced that the citizens of the State will require that the next session of the State Legislature at Harrisburg take necessary obstructive steps to readjust the tax on business," he said.

"Pennsylvania is at the cross roads. Either we will permit other states to win the industries which are our great wealth, with their incentive taxation, while we make it more and more difficult for business to remain in Pennsylvania or we will change our course and go marching to the new horizon by making Pennsylvania attractive to business and then selling the advantages this state offers to industry everywhere."

"Often a Bridesmaid"

BY HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER I

A CAR stopped outside. Aunt Bet heard the talk, and the laughter. The crunching of feet on the gravel walk.

She switched on the lamp at her bedside, and strained toward the small enameled clock, trying to focus without her glasses. It looked like half past four, but she couldn't be sure.

Half past four. What do young people find to do at such an hour? Not that she worried. Aunt Bet was used to young people and their ways, she merely wondered.

She recognized her niece Margaret's voice and Sue Decker's shrill, half hysterical giggle, and made a little face as she turned off the light, and lay back on her pillow. That girl! Everything in the world, more suitors than you could shake a stick at, and still breaking her silly neck to get Margaret's head!

He was out there now, with Margaret, and that nice Joe Atwell. As far as Aunt Bet was concerned, she could have the Raleigh boy. Margaret would do far better with Joe, or any of a half dozen others.

They were coming in now. She could hear the faint squeak of the front door, and the giggling as they tiptoed through the hall, on their way to the kitchen. Always giggling. She tried to think back to when she was nineteen, but she couldn't remember the giggling and the silly nothings that amused at times so much. Still, they were good girls. Especially Margaret. And Margaret would clean up the mess in the kitchen later so that no maid wouldn't have it to do in the morning.

Morning. Aunt Bet sighed and closed her eyes. It was practically morning now. She'd be glad when all this Senior week festivity was over, but in two or three years she'd have to go through it all again with the younger sisters, Natalie and Barbara.

For that matter, Natalie and Barbara were pretty well into it right now with Margaret. Margaret handed down the suitors she couldn't use, picking young ladies as they came, especially the baby, Babs, before their time.

And with all the boys to choose from Margaret had to pick out the best boy. Not that she was a democrat, but when a girl has half the eligible men in a community at her feet, there are any ways in her picking a nobody who doesn't happen to be good looking and plays football?

Aunt Bet sighed and turned over. It was a question that had no answer.

Downstairs, in the white, spotless kitchen, Margaret and the young ladies in question were busily cooking. The ham and eggs, while Sue and Babs balanced on the edge of the sink and shouted and giggled over the single highball they were consuming with two straws.

"Good liquor," Joe said judicially. "But not enough of it," Sue said. "It's all you're going to get. . . . Hey, don't drink so fast! Hey, Capt. Aw, Maggie, look, she's getting it all!"

Margaret smiled, without turning, went on basting the eggs. "Can't help it. That's all there is."

"Oh, Maggie, don't be stingy! And now there's a new case!"

Daddy doesn't mind how much is gone out of the decanter, but he'd have a fit if we've opened a case. Anyway, you've had enough. Too much. You're getting thick."

"I'm not drunk! I'm not, I'm not!"

"Too bad she drinks," Joe said. "She's a nice girl otherwise. Her parents are nice people, her friends are nice especially Joe Atwell and Maggie Wickham."

"I'm not drunk. Listen. I can prove it. I can say—"

Ken Raleigh, who'd been making toast in the oven, turned around and looked with distaste at the couldn't see it. Too sloppy, for one thing, and too fidgety. Rummaging up her hair, making faces, giggling at the top of her lungs. Why couldn't she be quiet like Margaret?

Margaret had ridden in the rumble with him and she didn't look windblown. She'd broiled ham and fried eggs and she looked as though she'd just jumped out of a bandbox. He loved the way her pale, blond hair sprang back from her broad, white brow. He loved the way the quick color came and went in her cheeks. He loved her delicate slimmness, her clear blue

Margaret smiled and, without turning, went on basting the eggs.

Today, giggling girl kicking slim, child-on-clad legs on the kitchen sink.

"Oh, pipe down, Sue."

Instantly Sue slipped from her perch on the sink, went and stood quietly by the back door.

Margaret frowned. Now Ken had done it again. Hurt Sue's feelings. Why couldn't he see she was showing off just for him and give her a break? But no, he had to go out of his way to be nasty.

"Come on," she called, rattling the coffee pot, making a lot of noise to cover the awkward moment. "Come on—everything's ready. Joe, you bring the cups, and, Sue, there's some jam in the icebox. Get the hot plates, Ken."

Sue came, but grudgingly. She couldn't hide the hurt in her dark, mobile face. Her scarlet mouth drooped, she watched Ken broodingly, out of dark, brilliant eyes.

Ken watched Margaret. He watched every movement of her quick, capable hands, every turn of her fair, lovely head.

She was, he thought for the thousandth time, the prettiest girl he'd ever seen. She was more than pretty—there was something serene and satisfying about her. Sue was probably just as pretty, in her own way. Lots of fellows thought she was prettier, but he

HAS NARROW ESCAPE

YARDLEY, Oct. 12.—Considerable damage was done to the car of Nicholas Czeglededi, of the New Jersey State Hospital, Trenton, N. J., when his car struck a culvert at the intersection of Afton avenue and Canal St. Monday, blowing his right front tire, forcing him from the road. His car swerved, and side-swiped the guard rails of the bridge over the Delaware Canal, and the only thing preventing his plunge into the Canal was a water plug. The spare tire was hurled from its case into the Canal.

Hollywood extras have discovered that one way to prevent being the "face on the cutting room floor" is by not attempting to hog the camera. Hollywood has a name for people who consistently poke their profiles into camera range. Such a person is known as a "lens louse," and directors abhor him.

But Hollywood has also discovered that certain faces in the extra ranks should be captured by the cameras, but only at certain times and in certain scenes.

“JUMPING JOE” SAVOLDI TO WRESTLE KASHEY

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 12.—“Jumping Joe” Savoldi, Notre Dame’s famous line crasher, and Abe “King Kong” Kashey, the surly Syrian, will clash in the feature wrestling bout at the Trenton Arena tonight. This match will bring together two of the foremost grapplers in the game and over the best two fall out of three, 90-minute time limit rule one of the liveliest bouts ever contested here is bound to ensue.

Savoldi has just returned from a three-year tour of Australia, New Zealand and Europe and his drop-kick attack, a finishing hold that made him famous in the wrestling world wreaked havoc in those foreign spots. He faces a tarrar in Kashey, who is one of the roughest, toughest grapplers in the game and the pet hatred of local fandom. Kashey lost a disputed decision to Sandor Szabo on the opening show and last week reached the heights of unpopularity when he downed Tom Mahoney.

The supporting card is one of the best ever arranged by Promoter Johnny Ipp. Dr. Len Hall, who held Szabo even for an hour and a half on the last card, returns against Jules Strongbow, 242 pound Cherokee Indian, who has not been defeated here. Joe Pazandak, winner of two straight bouts, meets Jack McArthur; Hank Matheny, capable westerner, faces Walter Percy of England, and John Gudinski, classy Pole, tangles with Tony Siano, former Fordham All-America center.

The first bout will start at 8.30 p. m.

NEWTOWN SOCCER TEAM HOPES TO FINISH AT TOP

NEWTOWN, Oct. 12.—Runners-up in the first Lower Bucks County field hockey league last year, the Newtown Bluebellies, under the guidance of Coach Mildred Unruh, hope to finish up on top of the heap this season.

And the way they started out against Fallsington, walloping the latter outfit, 5-0, at Newtown, in the season’s opener last week, it is evident that they apparently have a strong club out again this year. However, throughout the entire circuit most of the clubs have been strengthened and are set to give Buckingham and Newtown a struggle for the honors this season.

Coach Unruh has five vacancies left from the ‘37 team to fill, but she has apparently “uncovered” some good material from last year’s second team, and in newcomers this year for the combination, which took the field in the opener of the season last week, is well balanced and has a fine offensive attack as well as a good defense.

Miss Unruh has Naomi Hagerman, Dot Powell and Patsy Vandegrift as wings to fill the spot left by Ann Shields. Helen MacIntyre and Dot Bond are battling for the left inner spot, and at the vacant halfback posts, Margaret Shields and Gladys Dunkelberger seemed to have won those berths. Audrie DeCoursey is also giving battle to Walton and Sherman for a starting job at fullback. Alberta VanHorn and Alice Forsyth are two more candidates for a spot at a flank post.

LOWER BUCKS LEAGUE OPENS SEASON THIS WEEK

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Oct. 12.—When Newtown High invades the Owl field at Bensalem, Friday, they will play the first Lower Bucks County League conference fray of the 1938 season. And, incidentally, the same two clubs opened the conference season last year when they met at Newtown in the opening game of the 1937 campaign.

This year, however, the schools decided to play a few games before going into league tilts so they might be in better condition for the more important contests. Therefore, this fray was moved down from the first to the third fracas of the year.

Two other LBCL schools will be battling each other on Friday but that game will not count as an official conference tussle because it was scheduled only “incidentally” to help fill the cards of the two schools, since both had an open date this week on the original list of games. However, the tilt carded for Langhorne on November 4th will count as the official conference contest.

After the Bensalem-Newtown game, there will be at least one conference game a week until the end of the season on Thanksgiving Day. Next week Fallsington and Morrisville will lift the lid on their conference schedule when they clash at Morrisville, and the following week Langhorne and Bristol will follow suit in a game to be played on the Cardinals field.

Coach Charles Beck’s Langhorne Redskins is the only school to play the maximum number of games, five, they having scheduled all league foes. On the other hand, Bristol is the only school to play the minimum number of league tilts. They will play only three, meeting Langhorne, Newtown and, of course, Morrisville, in that order. Bensalem, Fallsington and Morrisville will each play four conference games. There will be 12 conference scraps to be waged through the entire season with the Newtown-Bensalem struggle the opener on Friday, October 14, and the Newtown at Langhorne, and Morrisville at Bristol tilts closing the campaign on Thanksgiving Day.

The Bensalem-Fallsington game, scheduled at Fallsington, has been moved up one day to Wednesday, November 23, at the request of Fallsington officials.

The Great Game of Politics

will damage the President’s prestige, diminish his control over Congress, lessen his chances of dominating the 1940 national convention. There seems little doubt about that. Under the circumstances it would be politically stupid for him not to do everything he can to help hold these States. The most effective way to do this is to supplement the weight of the WPA and the rest of the Federal machine with a personal appeal. That is the argument. There has been, he is told, no decrease in his personal popularity, and it might easily be that a few speeches from him would mean the difference between victory and defeat.

THE President’s personal inclination is to believe this and his personal desire is to make the indicated speeches. For these reasons the conviction is strong that he will at least make one in New York and that this will be of such a nature as to help in the others. However, there are among the Presidential advisers at least some whose belief in the magic of his personal presence has been weakened and who are doubtful of the wisdom both for him and for the candidates of personal intervention—even in New York. Their reasoning seems fairly sound. In the first place, they point out that last summer in three States—Maryland, South Carolina and Georgia—in which the President personally appealed to the Democratic voters, the appeals were so far from successful as to lend color to the claim that he did his personally endorsed candidates more harm than good. In no State was it clear last summer that the personal plea of the President nominated his choice in the primaries—not even in Kentucky.

IT IS easily possible that, should the President now project himself into the State campaigns, it might lose State candidates votes of anti-New Deal Democrats which they otherwise would get. The capacity of the voters for resentment ought not to be underrated. So far as New York is concerned, while it is true it is Mr. Roosevelt’s home State, nevertheless there are particular reasons for embarrassment. One is that while one of the things to which Governor Lehman points with pride is the balancing of the State’s budget in spite of the $100,000,000 deficit which he inherited from his predecessor—Franklin D. Roosevelt—the President has publicly and pointedly sneered at this budget-balancing claim, contending that it was done only with Federal aid. Certainly this opens the door for a handsome Republican retort to any general Roosevelt eulogy of Lehman.

—O—

THERE is the further embarrassment that Governor Lehman strongly opposed the President’s Court Packing plan and for many months was vilified and denounced by White House spokesmen and reflectors of New Deal opinion. Couple these things with the fact that Governor Lehman already is supported by the radical labor elements and others with New Dealish tendencies, by the Federal jobholders under the Farley orders and by the relief organization under Mr. Hopkins, and the question naturally arises as to what votes Mr. Roosevelt with a speech could swing to either Lehman or Wagner, which they have not yet already.

—O—

A FINAL argument made by those who think the President will be wise to keep out of the State campaigns, including New York, is this: If he speaks and the ticket wins, the local candidates will not give him the credit. On the contrary, they will remain convinced that they could have won anyhow—and probably by a bigger majority. But, if he speaks and the Democrats lose, then the full blame will be put on him. It will be said that if he had kept out they might have pulled through. As noted above, it is a question of judgment, but the itch of the President to speak and his belief in his own strength with the people probably means at least one speech in New York.
